For students living in on-base military housing or in housing for which the military provides a Basic Allowance for Housing (BAH), the COA cannot include an allowance for Housing. The institution can only include an allowance for food expenses reasonably incurred by such students. This provision applies to an independent student who receives or whose spouse receives, a BAH. It also applies to a dependent student living with their parent(s) who are living in on-base military housing or receiving a BAH. The BAH paid to active-duty military personnel is distinct from the Monthly Housing Allowance (MHA) paid to students receiving veteran’s educational benefits under the Post 9/11 GI Bill. Students receiving an MHA as part of their veteran’s benefits should have a housing allowance included in their COA. This COA housing allowance may be partially or completely offset by the veteran’s benefits received by the student.

Additional COA Components	Additional COA Components are Based on Qualifying Conditions, Supporting Documentation is Required.
Dependent Care Based on Age of Child/Children & Number of Children	The actual cost of child care is added to the student's COA if the student pays for child care to attend school, travel to school, or to study.
Disability-Related Costs	The actual cost of disability-related expenses is added to the student's COA if the student pays disability-related expenses including special services, personal assistance, transportation, equipment and supplies, that are reasonably incurred and not provided for by other assisting agencies.
Direct Loan Fees	The actual loan fees for Direct subsidized loans, Direct unsubsidized loans, and Direct PLUS (parent) loans are added to the student's COA if the student or parent borrows federal Direct Loans. By federal regulation, it is not permitted to add fees for alternative or private loans to a student's COA calculation.
Cooperative Program Expenses &/or Study Abroad Expenses Licensure Fees	Triangle Tech does not participate in Cooperative Programs or Study Abroad Programs. Students are not required to take licensure exams to work in their field of study.

On a case-by-case basis, certain elements of a student’s COA can be adjusted based on special or unusual circumstances, upon presentation of adequate documentation by the student.
